On Christmas Eve, I went to her. “I’ve been waiting for you,” she said and she gave me a small parcel. “Open it tomorrow. Merry Christmas!” she said. “What’s it?” “It’s magic,” was all she said. On Christmas Day, before the sun was up, I opened her parcel. Inside was a pile of ten thin black sheets labelled ‘Carbon Paper’. I could understand only the second word. I remembered the present had something to do with magic. “Is it magic?” I asked my mother. “It really is!” she said. She took two sheets of white paper, placed one black paper between them and wrote my name on the top sheet. Then, she handed me the second white sheet which her pencil had not touched. And there was my name! I was thrilled. What a wise woman! Mrs Long had made me a magician.
